

The Digital Humanities and Born-Digital Sources: Web Archives, Tweets, and the Record of Today

Historians are largely unprepared to engage with the quantity of digital sources that will fundamentally transform their trade.

... we need to think about big data ...

Today's Talk

- 1. Prologue: Big Data is everywhere
- 2. The Web Age: Will accelerate this process
- 3. What can we do with big data?

A Prologue: Big Data is Everywhere

What do we mean by Big Data?

- Computational definition: the 5 Vs (Volume, Velocity, Variety, Veracity, and Value)
- “For us, as humanists, big is in the eye of the beholder. If it’s more data that you could conceivably read yourself in a reasonable amount of time, or that requires computational intervention to make new sense of it, it’s big enough!” (Shawn Graham, Ian Milligan, Scott Weingart, Exploring Big Historical Data)

Why is it everywhere?

As Wall Street's corrupt influence on the economy has grown, the corporate ownership of our food system has hurt the health and livelihood's of some of our most vulnerable communities. This Sunday, December 4th food justice activists and occupiers will be traveling from as far as Colorado, Iowa, Maine and Upstate New York to join together for the Occupy Wall Street FARMERS' MARCH. Through a day of dialogue, musical performances, and a march, farmers and their urban allies working for food justice in their communities will form alliances to fight and expose corporate control of the food supply.

Events throughout the day will call and inspire participants to fight against the corporate manipulation of the agriculture system. An industry that is responsible for using chemical toxins tied to soaring obesity rates, heart disease and diabetes and limiting access to affordable, wholesome food to the country's poorest citizens.

Nightmare Scenario

- Historians rely uncritically on date-ordered keyword search results, putting them at mercy of search algorithms they do not understand (similar to digitized newspapers);

My deepest fear:
Historians are completely left out of post-1996 research, letting everybody else do the work (a la Culturomics project/Science magazine article);

The historians who came to the meeting were intelligent, kind, and encouraging. But they didn't seem to have a good sense of how to wield quantitative data to answer questions, didn't have relevant computational skills, and didn't seem to have the time to dedicate to a big multiauthor collaboration. It's not their fault: these things don't appear to be taught or encouraged in history departments right now.

Below this, it displays the title "Canadian Political Parties Groups" collected by "University of Toronto". It notes the collection was archived since Oct, 2005, and describes it as containing national Canadian political parties and a number of specific political interest groups. The subject is listed as "Politics & Elections". A "Narrow Your Results" section allows users to filter by subject, with options like New Democratic Party of Canada (2), Assembly of First Nations (1), Bloc Québécois (1), Canada First (1), and Canada West Foundation (1). A search bar at the bottom right allows users to enter search terms here. The footer includes links for "Sites" and "Search Page Text", and a page number "Page 1 of 1 (54)".

Five Things We Learned

- Political parties delete content
- User-generated comments were more common in political parties
- Absences can be more informative than presences
- We can see the rise/fall of prominent people
- Enabling user access is truly transformative

try it on this data!

Step-by-Step Walkthrough

Once you've downloaded the file, open up Gephi.

On the opening screen, you want to select “Open a Graph File...” and select the `all-links-cpp-link.graphml` file that you downloaded from our Dataverse page.

You then want to click ‘ok’ on the next page. Create a ‘new graph.’

Do you want to make this link graph yourself from our data? Read on.

You should now see what I (nerdily) call a borg cube. That's good, because it means that the data is in there. We need to make it usable, however.

Click on the “Data Laboratory” tab at the top.

Click on “Nodes” above. When it is shaded behind it, that means that it is selected.

Click on “Copy Data to another Column,” select ID, and then select “label” on the drop

ENTRE COMMISSIONS YOUR RIDING  Celebrating our National Flag  February 15, 2006 February 15 is Nationa l Flag Day in Canada, which marks the 41st anniversary of the first raising of the maple leaf flag on P arliament Hill. Today is a celebration of our shared values, common citizenship and sense of pride in t his great country we call home. The Canadian flag is one of the most recognizable symbols in the world and flies proudly to remind us all of who we are and where we come from. The maple leaf's symbolic orig ins date back to the beginning of our nation's history, while the red and white bars on the flag repres ent strength and unity. Canada's flag was adopted in 1964 under the courageous leadership of Liberal Pr ime Minister Lester B. Pearson. The idea of changing the Red Ensign which featured the Britain's Union Jack, was very controversial at the time, with the Conservative Party strongly opposed to changing the status quo. Facing strong Conservative resistance in the House of Commons, Pearson's minority governme nt fought hard in the name of national unity and Canada's multicultural future to make the new flag a r eality. In an impassioned speech to the House of Commons, Pearson said: "Mr. Speaker, it is for this g eneration, for this Parliament, to give them and to give us all a common flag; a Canadian flag which, w hile bringing together but rising above the landmarks and milestones of the past, will say proudly to t he world and to the future: I stand for Canada." Thanks to Pearson's courageous leadership, Canadians a cross this great nation celebrate our flag and what it stands for – a country and a citizenship that ar e the envy of the world.

Step One: Ingesting the Data

Once the hard drives arrived, it was fun to watch the data populate our server as Nick supervised the time-consuming job of moving over 4TB of data from two hard drives onto our server at York University.

About the Programming Historian

The Programming Historian offers novice-friendly, peer-reviewed tutorials that help humanists learn a wide range of digital tools, techniques, and workflows to facilitate their research.

We regularly publish new lessons, and we always welcome proposals for new lessons on any topic. Our editorial mentors will be happy to work with you throughout the lesson writing process. If you'd like to be a reviewer or if you have suggestions to make Programming Historian a more useful resource, please see our Contribute page.

Our Project Team and peer reviewers work collaboratively with authors to craft tutorials that illustrate fundamental digital and programming principles and
